Dear Bernard,

Re: Centurion Cricket pitch

Further to the installation of seven new training wickets, I thought I would share my thoughts and those of the assortment of the players to date.

First comments are of course the impressive colourway, being almost identical to a natural turf wicket.

This alone tends to "win over" our coaches and students immediately.

We have found the wickets to have a very consistent true bounce, which is great for both batsmen to play shots and bowlers to get quality bounce and seam.

In addition, the product appears to spin slightly more than conventional synthetic wickets, which is great for coaching spin bowlers.

The 11mm product tends to be slightly slower, allowing the ball to carry encouraging opportunities to practice back foot shots.

The combination of both provides ideal training facilities.

In closing, the fact that the product is made from recycled plastic fits well into the environmental standards the school seeks to promote.

Yours faithfully,
